Such cleansing compositions generally comprise cleansing surfactants and a carrier liquid. The carrier liquid can be any suitable aqueous liquid. The cleansing surfactants can be of the anionic, nonionic, cationic or zwitterionic type. In the past, the main focus of cleansing compositions has been on providing products that are both effective at removing dirt and grime from the skin and at providing the user with a feeling of cleanliness after the cleansing process has been completed. However, there is a need in the art for a cleansing composition that can deliver an improved feeling of cleanliness and hydration to skin after cleansing. The composition of the present invention has been found to be surprisingly effective at providing skin with a hydrated appearance, smooth skin feel, and improved skin resilience after cleansing. In addition, the composition of the present invention is effective at delivering to the skin the active agents that are applied to the skin for the treatment of skin conditions and 82157476af
